LIFESTYLE INTERVENTION IMPROVES HIGH SCHOOLERS' HEALTH, SOCIAL SKILLS, GRADES

A teacher-delivered intervention program promoting healthy lifestyles improved health behaviors, social skills, severe depression, and academic performance in high school adolescents, a study has found. Routine integration of such programs into health education curricula in high school settings may be an effective way to prevent high-risk teen populations from becoming overweight or obese, and could lead to improved physical health, psychosocial skills, and academic outcomes, according to the study. The study, supported by the National Institute of Nursing Research appears in the online September issue of the American Journal of Preventive Medicine. It is one of the first studies to report multiple immediate improvements that were sustained over time using a teacher-delivered, cognitive-behavioral skills-building intervention program incorporated into a high school health education class.

NIH LAUNCHES FIRST NATIONAL DOWN SYNDROME REGISTRY; REGISTRY CONNECTS FAMILIES AND INDIVIDUALS WITH DOWN SYNDROME TO RESEARCHERS

The National Institutes of Health (NIH) has launched DS-Connect, a web-based health registry that will serve as a national health resource for people with Down syndrome and their families, researchers, and health care providers. Participation in the registry is free and voluntary. Individuals with Down syndrome, or family members, on their behalf, may sign up to create personalized profiles with information about their health histories, including symptoms, diagnoses, and medical visits. The website has been designed to ensure that all information remains confidential. The site will separate users' names from their health information, so that individuals may compare their health information with that of all other participants in an anonymous manner. If participants give permission to be contacted, the registry coordinator can inform them of research studies in which they may be interested. Results from these studies will help researchers better understand Down syndrome and how to treat its accompanying health problems across the lifespan.

NATIONAL SURVEY SHOWS CONTINUED REDUCED LEVELS OF PRESCRIPTION DRUG USE AMONG YOUNG ADULTS; REPORT ALSO SHOWS CONTINUED REDUCED RATES OF ALCOHOL USE AMONG THOSE AGED 12 TO 17

The rate of past month nonmedical use of prescription drugs among young adults aged 18 to 25 in 2012 was 5.3 percent – similar to rates in 2010 and 2011, but significantly lower than the rate from 2009, according to a new report by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA). SAMHSA issued its 2012 National Survey on Drug Use and Health report in conjunction with the 24th annual national observance of National Recovery Month. The SAMHSA report also found that the rates of past month drinking, binge drinking, and heavy drinking among underage adolescents aged 12 to 17 remained lower than their levels in 2002 and 2009.

NEARLY 18 PERCENT OF PREGNANT WOMEN DRINK ALCOHOL IN EARLY STAGES OF PREGNANCY; LEVELS OF ALCOHOL USE DROP IN LATER STAGES OF PREGNANCY

Approximately 18 percent of women in their first trimester of pregnancy used alcohol within the past month according to a new SAMHSA report. The report showed that 6.6 percent of women in their first trimester of pregnancy engaged in binge drinking (i.e., drinking five or more drinks on the same occasion at least once in the past 30 days). Women who drink alcohol while pregnant increase their infants' risk of developing a Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorder, a group of conditions that can cause physical, behavioral and learning problems – some of which may have lifelong repercussions. Although there is no safe amount of alcohol for pregnant women to drink, they can lower the risk for their infants when they stop drinking alcohol immediately after finding out they are pregnant.

WEBINAR: PTSD, MILITARY SEXUAL TRAUMA, AND PRETERM BIRTH—EVIDENCE FROM 16,000 PREGNANCIES

SEPTEMBER 18, 2013, 2:00-3:00 PM ET

This VA Health Services Research and Development webinar presents the findings from an analysis of the over 16,000 deliveries (12 percent with active post-traumatic stress disorder [PTSD] diagnoses) covered by the VA since 2000, to determine the extent to which post-traumatic stress is associated with preterm birth. Preterm delivery rates are found to be significantly higher in those with an active diagnosis of PTSD, and this association remained in a multivariate analysis that included adjustment for history of deployment and military sexual trauma, and was a stronger predictor than alternative mental health diagnoses.
